15 MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION
16 (Docket No. 583; opposition Docket No. 775)
17

18 This matter is before the court on motion to exclude other crimes and bad 19 conduct evidence and motion to strike portions of superceding indictment¹ making 20 reference to other crimes and bad conduct evidence, filed on July 21, 2005. (Docket 21 No. 583.) The United States opposed the motion to exclude evidence and to strike
22 on December 19, 2005. (Docket No. 775.)
23

24 Co-defendant Ayala-López seeks to strike the following language from what is 25 now the third superceding indictment :
26

- 27 (A.) Page 4, Paragraph 2: Referring to Defendant Carlos
28 L. Ayala-Lopez, the Superseding Indictment alleges 29 that, ". . . he possessed, brandished, carried, used 30 and discharged firearms in furtherance of the 31 conspiracy. He participated in robberies of 32 businesses and individuals to obtain things of value
33 to sell and generate proceeds to purchase narcotics.
34 He also participated in shootings against rival drug 35 traffickers operating within Llorens Torres to protect 36 the drug pint located in Las Malvinas."

37 ¹The defense makes reference to statements in the superceding indictment.
38 However, the statements correspond exactly in the description to statements made 39 in the third superceding indictment.

11 The defense moves the court to exclude this evidence and to strike the 12 references of bad conduct from the pending indictment.² The defendant argues that 13 such evidence is inadmissible, emphasizing that evidence of prior bad acts is 14 admissible under Rule 404(b) if such evidence is relevant to an issue other than 15 defendant's character, is sufficient to support a finding that the defendant actually 16 committed the extrinsic act, and if its probative value is not substantially 17 outweighed by unfair prejudice. See United States v. Utter, 97 F.3d 509, 513 (11th 18 Cir. 1996); United States v. Miller, 959 F.2d 1535, 1538 (11th Cir. 1992). The 19 defendant argues that other crimes evidence and bad conduct evidence recited above
 20 is not relevant to an issue other than the defendant's character. The defendant 21 stresses that the list of other crimes evidence is evidence for which the defendant
 22 has not been charged. The objectionable evidence arguably improperly incriminates 23 the defendant in a series of offenses, including possession of a firearm, possession
 24 of marijuana, and participation in robberies and shootings. The defendant objects 25 to the parading of this litany before the jury.

26

27 ²This report will focus on the motion to strike since the motion to exclude evidence of bad act is pending and is dealt with separately in Docket Nos. 573, 574, 582, and 652.

The United States opposes the motion in a terse reply. It stresses that the conduct charged in the overt acts of Count One are acts carried out in furtherance of the drug trafficking conspiracy charged and that therefore such evidence is relevant and admissible at trial, particularly since all of the alleged acts occurred within the time frame of the drug trafficking conspiracy charged and also demonstrate the defendant's participation in the conspiracy. The government also notes that a probable cause determination has been made as to each overt act. Aside from arguing that these acts were brought out in the first trial, the government argues that they tend to prove that the defendant was a member in the charged conspiracy. Evidence of such evidence will thus allow a jury to determine guilt as to count one. Furthermore, evidence of possession of firearms on February 28, 2002 and March 31, 2002 are arguably direct evidence of the offenses charged in Counts Two and Three of the (Third) Superceding Indictment.

An indictment should only contain those facts and elements of the alleged offense necessary to inform the accused of the charges so that he can prepare a defense. See United States v. Sepúlveda, 15 F.3d 1161, 1192 (1st Cir. 1993). While not essential, many conspiracy indictments contain overt acts. An overt act contained in such indictment "need not be the substantive crime that is the object of the conspiracy, nor even criminal in character; its function is to show the operation of the conspiracy." United States v. Medina, 761 F.2d 12, 14 (1st Cir. 1985) (citing Yates v. United States, 354 U.S. 298, 334 (1957)³). "But it does not follow from this that an overt act cannot be another crime. In United States v. Murzyn, 631 F.2d 525, 534-35 (7th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 923, 101 S. Ct.

³Overruled on other grounds by Burks v. United States, 437 U.S. 1 (1978).

3 1373, 67 L.Ed.2d 351 (1981), the court held that intrastate auto thefts were 4 properly alleged as overt acts because the acts were taken to ‘effect the object of the 5 conspiracy,’ the interstate transportation and sale of stolen motor vehicles.” United 6 States v. Medina, 761 F.2d at 14. Such overt acts can serve as a roadmap to help the 7 jury in understanding the details of the conspiracy. “[A]n indictment is sufficiently 8 particular if it elucidates the elements of the crime, enlightens a defendant as to the 9 nature of the charge against which [he] must defend, and enables [him] to plead
10 double jeopardy in bar of future prosecutions for the same offense.” United States 11 v. Sepúlveda, 15 F.3d at 1192 (citations omitted). While it may be unnecessary to 12 place three overt acts in an indictment for a violation of 21 U.S.C. § 846, it is not 13 prohibited. Cf. United States v. Escobar De Jesús, 187 F.3d 148, 168 n.16 (1st Cir.
14 1999); United States v. Aponte-Suárez, 905 F.2d 483, 488 (1st Cir. 1990).
15 Furthermore, if these overt acts refer to carrying or using weapons, which are 16 recognized tools of the narcotics trade, the indictment produced by the grand jury, 17 should, as returned, proceed to trial untouched. See United States v. Green, 887
18 F.2d 25, 27 (1st Cir. 1989); United States v. Cresta, 825 F.2d 538, 554 (1st 19 Cir. 1988); United States v. Trullo, 809 F.2d 108, 113 (1st Cir. 1987); United States
20 v. Tormes-Ortiz, 710 F. Supp. 409, 411 (D.P.R. 1989).

21 In view of the above, I recommend that the portion of the motion to exclude 22 other crimes and bad conduct evidence and motion to strike portions of superceding 23 indictment making reference to other crimes and bad conduct evidence be denied in 24 part, that is, in relation to the part of the motion which moves to strike portions of 25 superceding indictment making reference to other crimes and bad conduct evidence.
26 I further recommend that the remainder of the motion referring to exclusion of 27 evidence remain pending.
